

Failing to deliver

I recently received a piece of mail from Keith Kelly, who is the incumbent representative from District 35. It said he promised to crack down on illegal immigration and that he delivered with tough immigration reform.

Does he think his district is not smart enough to understand that "delivered" is not the same as "failed to deliver"? The current representation in Columbia has not delivered anything. All we get back home is finger pointing and excuses. Instead of spending time trying to convince us that they have done something, maybe they should spend more time actually doing it.

It's time to get some new people in the Statehouse who will actually do something and not just talk about it. I'm backing Roger Nutt because he has proven to his customers over the years that he will keep his word and work hard to actually get results. The way things are going, it looks like Mr. Nutt may be voting on this immigration reform in January 2009! It's time to end the finger pointing and vote for a true conservative!
